FASHION'S 50 MOST POWERFUL

The New Yorkers who make a $47 billion industry tick

BY MARK ELLWOOD

The people behind the city's second-largest business are moving at a frenzied pace right now, as Fashion Week gets set to kick off at Bryant Park next Friday. More than 150,000 employees at 15,000 companies make it happen year-round, from the high-profile designers to the guys manning the doors at the shows. These are the 50 who call the shots.

Fashion's 50 most powerful: No. 36

JOEL ISAACS, president, Isaacs & Co. Isaacs is a retail real estate guru who has wrangled spaces for everyone from Prada and its portfolio (Church's, Miu Miu, Jil Sander) to Diesel and G-Star. He even helped lure Hermès' 5,500-square-foot megastore to the Financial District.
